Colin Farrell and Vince Vaughn confirmed to star in the second season of HBO's True Detective

Miami, FL – September 23, 2014 – HBO confirmed today that Colin Farrell and Vince Vaughn will star in season two of the Emmy® nominated original series True Detective. Created and written by Nic Pizzolatto, the eight-episode, hour-long drama is set to begin production later this fall in California, with the first two episodes under the direction of Justin Lin.

In the new season, three police officers and a career criminal must navigate a web of conspiracy in the aftermath of a murder. Colin Farrell will star as Ray Velcoro, a compromised detective whose allegiances are torn between his masters in a corrupt police department and the mobster who owns him, and Vince Vaughn will play Frank Semyon, a career criminal in danger of losing his empire when his move into legitimate enterprise is upended by the murder of a business partner.

Additional casting will be announced as it is confirmed.
